Total received .....	$1,615.04

Employees of the composing room of the Chicago Herald know the garment strike is not over. They hear first-hand reports from the reporters who know the strike is still on, no matter what these newsgatherers write to suit the viewpoint of the Herald, with care to offend no advertiser.

Typographical union members employed in the Herald composing room today sent in $23.25 for the strike fund.

The strike is not over. A member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers was sent to a hospital with a split head last night, the result of a blow from a cop's club. There was a street brawl when scabs tried to insult strikers last night. Most emphatically, the strike is not over, except at the places where the 48-hour week with the old 52 to 54 hours' pay has been granted.

Day Book Student, a Public Forum contributor, sent in $3 more today. That makes $10 this man has given to the strike fund.

The strikers have an excellent chance to gain victory for 10,000 more workers if they can get pennies enough to hold out a little longer.

CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS MUST PLAY SAFE WITH FILMS

Chicago churches and schools will not be allowed to run movie shows without licensed operators and a booth for the machine, such as is held as necessary safety in precautions in theaters. The aldermanic committee considering the request of the ministers for the right to run movie shows voted in the negative, 8 to 4.

Union men protested. They insisted the non-inflammable films the churches promised to run were inflammable, further that they were exceedingly expensive and would last only two or three weeks, so that the ministers would soon be ringing in inflammable films on their shows.

The moving picture operators' union has a standing offer to let schools and churches have a licensed union operator; free of charge, any time they need one.

COTTON MILL LOBBY WANTS TO KILL CHILD LABOR BILL?

Washington, Dec. 18.—That lobby of cotton mill interests is seeking to kill child labor bill in its infancy was alleged today. Although introduced nearly two weeks ago by Rep. Keating of Colorado, the bill is still on Speaker Clark's desk.

Foes of the bill are trying to have it sent to the house interstate commerce committee.

The provision for excluding from interstate commerce all merchandise made in whole or part by immature children is point on which dispute over committee reference hangs.

Ohio man won't let his daughter go to school because teacher tells her earth is round. He says it's flat.
